

Procurement Exceptions Manual

Controlled evaluation source - Version 1.0

Terminology bridge

The emergency-response exception is formally titled the Rapid Continuity Clause (RCC).

Context - Intake

This intake context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This intake context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This intake context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Archive

This archive context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This archive context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This archive context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Scheduling

This scheduling context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This scheduling context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This scheduling context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Facilities

This facilities context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This facilities context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This facilities context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Training

This training context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This training context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This training context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Budget

This budget context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This budget context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This budget context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Inventory

This inventory context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This inventory context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This inventory context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Communications

This communications context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This communications context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This communications context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Travel

This travel context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This travel context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This travel context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Meetings

This meetings context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This meetings context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This meetings context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Quality

This quality context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This quality context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This quality context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Support

This support context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This support context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This support context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Reporting

This reporting context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This reporting context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This reporting context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Context - Planning

This planning context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This planning context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material. This planning context note uses the phrases general rule, exception, and approval only to describe search and indexing practice. It records no controlled answer to the evaluation question. The note covers routine ownership, meeting preparation, archive handling, training coordination, and administrative follow-up. Its vocabulary is intentionally broad, while authoritative decisions remain in the separately headed controlled section. Readers must not infer a policy decision, approved definition, mandatory control, exception, or operational name from this contextual material.

Approved record

Under the RCC, an incident commander may authorize an immediate purchase without three bids when delay threatens service continuity.